It is the proper thing now to belong to a class of some kind, and every one, whether in school or out, young or old, has some sort of study on hand. There are literary classes both for classical and modern studies, Shakspeare, Geo. Eliot, Browning and classes for other special authors, but the newest is the Newspaper Class. This last meets several times a week. Its subjects, political, social, scientific, lectures, foreign powers and news are discussed, and the ladies belonging to it declare they get more benefit in thus dischester gave an elegant and brilldiscussed, and the ladies belonging to it declare they get more benefit in thus discussing general topics than they would in reading any quantity of books. The Newspaper Class bids fair to be very popular, as the members are very enthusiastic.

tended. The musical programme was as follows: Piano solo, Laura Hendrix; vocal solo, Ida Man-ley; vocal duet, Miss Laura Hendrix and Wall Piano solo, Laura Hendrix; vocal solo, Ida Manley; vocal duet, Miss Laura Hendrix and Wall Panley; piecolo solo, Orville Perry. The frations were: "Christianity and Reform," Charles M. Hubbard; "The American Flag," Joseph W. Murphy; "The Ethics of Labor," Stanford F. Teeter; "Drifting with the Tide," Taylor E. Gromiger; "The Coming Conflict," Watson Nicholsong "The Power of Ideals," Adam N. Curll. Mr. Hubbard affirmed that the hope of our Nation for reform must rest in some agency that appeals to the heart. Christianity has shown its adaptability to reform. The speaker's delivery was characterized with ease and earnestness. Mr. Murphy, in a style betokening sympathy with his subject, paid a strong tribute to our flag. Mr. Teeter presented a good appearance, and proved himself the possessor of a good voice. He maintained that the scope of education as related to labor is too narrow; that it should embrace manual training and moral development. Mr. Gromiger had the most pleasing delivery of the evening. The advantages that lie in clear enunciation and natural bearing were certainly his. His oration was designed to impress the need of concentrated purpose. The two following speeches were of higher classes. Mr. Nicholson showed superiority in rhetorical style, and graceful gesticulation. Mr. Crull's oration evinced original thought, viz.: The power of ideals in molding history. His delivery had much force; his gestures were few and simple, but appropriate. Mr. Crull, of the juniors, and Mr. Hubbard, of the sophomore class, were the winners of the prizes of $15 each. The other contestants have no reason to feel dejected, as they have acquired valuable experience in speaking. A large audience indicated sympathy with the cause of literary work. The music was a pleasing and very enjoyable feature. The judges were Professor Atwater, Rev. S. R. Lyons, and Walter E. Woodburn. The prizes were by the business firm of Wicks & Co., and are certainly highly appreciated by all connected with the university.
